

Comprehensive celebrations of film art and local history

The Cinema Heritage Project is a grassroots nonprofit corporation dedicated to nurturing public understanding of Southern California's role as the backdrop for the greatest movies ever made. Founded in 2006 by citizen activists in the Western San Fernando Valley, its mission includes fostering community pride, enhancing historical awareness, supporting preservation of movie landmarks and enriching the cultural life of the region.

With funding from public and private sources, including the West Hills Neighborhood Council, Fallbrook Center and other agencies, businesses, charitable foundations and individuals, the Cinema Heritage Project presents events that celebrate the movies and the places where they are made.

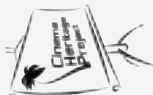

Depending on the movie and the location, a Cinema Heritage Project event can include: presentation of the movie in a manner that best emphasizes its setting; displays of photographs and artifacts highlighting the location's history and the film's production; talks by experts in film and local history; tours of the site; dinner and music; a celebrity reception; and exclusive talks by members of the cast and crew.

The Cinema Heritage Project welcomes volunteers and sponsors. For information, call (818) 348-8657 or write to: Cinema Heritage Project, P.O. Box 4099, West Hills, CA 91308. E-mail: CinemaHeritage@aol.com.

On Sept. 15, 2007, the Cinema Heritage Project presented its inaugural event, a screening of "The Children's Hour" at Shadow Ranch Park in West Hills, Calif.

An audience of 200 people watched the 1961 MGM drama in front of the historic house where it was filmed. Guests toured the location and heard exclusive reminiscences by stars Shirley MacLaine and Karen Balkin, assistant director Robert Relyea and other members of the crew.
